MANAGER'S COMMENTS

United States (US) equity markets rebounded robustly in April 2026 (April), driven by strong technology sector earnings and the fragile ceasefire in the Middle East. The Nasdaq Composite surged 15.29%, while the Standard & Poor (S&P) 500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average advanced 10.42% and 7.14% respectively. Sentiment was buoyed by artificial intelligence capital expenditure themes and upward earnings revisions. European equities recovered alongside global risk assets, with the STOXX 600 Index recording a 4.83% gain for the month. In Asia, markets demonstrated strong momentum. South Korea's KOSPI led regional gains with a substantial 30.61% increase, supported by the semiconductor supply chain and artificial intelligence infrastructure demand. Japan's Nikkei 225 rebounded 16.10%. Greater China equities also advanced, as the Shenzhen Component, Shanghai Composite, and Hang Seng Index rose 9.50%, 5.66%, and 3.99% respectively. This rally was underpinned by robust export resilience despite the Middle East conflict, driven by proactive market diversification and strong domestic energy security, alongside alleviated investors sentiment fuelled by global artificial intelligence demand and supportive government policies. On the domestic front, the Malaysian equity market registered steady growth in April 2026. The benchmark FBM KLCI advanced 1.87%, driven by positive global sentiment. Broader market participation was evident as the FBM EMAS, FBMS, and FBMSCSM indices gained 3.41%, 4.96%, and 7.10% respectively. The market's resilience was driven by an early-month recovery as geopolitical risks surrounding the United States and Iran conflict began to ease. Furthermore, domestic policy support, including the MY Value Up Programme and MSME financing initiatives, alongside a firm 5.3% first-quarter gross domestic product growth estimate, provided a stable underlying foundation. Overall value traded on the KLCI declined by 18.16% during the month. In commodities, crude oil prices retraced 3.67% as geopolitical risk premiums began to moderate following the ceasefire extension. Crude Palm Oil prices fell 5.34%, and gold experienced a marginal decline of 0.39%. Meanwhile, the Malaysian Ringgit appreciated 1.92% against the greenback.

April's robust relief rally, spurred by easing geopolitical tensions, thoroughly validated our view of the March pullback as a strategic "valuation reset." However, while artificial intelligence themes drive equities higher, the underlying macroeconomic reality remains rigid. The Federal Reserve (the Fed) has effectively cemented a "higher-for-longer" interest rate environment, creating a climate that strictly demands tangible cash flow over speculative growth. Against this tighter global liquidity backdrop, the broader Asian region is demonstrating remarkable structural resilience, fortified by a robust export recovery and supportive domestic policies. Looking past traditional "Sell in May" seasonality, the path forward demands rigorous selectivity. We remain structurally bullish on Emerging Markets, pivoting our focus toward high-quality companies with resilient balance sheets and direct exposure to the regional technology supply chain, positioning our portfolios to outcompete in a persistently high-rate era.
