MANAGER'S COMMENTS

In September 2025 (September), the United States (US) equity market delivered robust gains, with the Dow Jones, Standard & Poor (S&P) 500, and NASDAQ up 1.87%, 3.53%, and 5.61%, respectively. The rally was fuelled by optimism following the Federal Reserve's (The Fed) rate cut, strong corporate earnings, and solid Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth. European equities also advanced, with the STOXX Europe 600 rising 1.46%. Sentiment improved as the European Central Bank's (ECB) decision to keep rates unchanged reduced policy uncertainty amid hopes for a gradual euro-area recovery. Japan's Nikkei 225 climbed 5.18%, supported by easing inflation and strong gains in US tech stocks that lifted Japanese AI-related names. Chinese equities rose as well, with the Hang Seng Index, Shanghai Composite, and Shenzhen Composite up 7.09%, 0.64%, and 3.10%, respectively, underpinned by a rotation of domestic savings into equities, targeted policy support from Beijing, and sustained optimism around Artificial Intelligence (AI). Malaysia's equity indices edged higher in September, with the Financial Times Stock Exchange Bursa Malaysia Kuala Lumpur Composite Index (FBMVKLCI), FBM EMAS, and FBM Emas Shariah rising 2.33%, 2.42%, and 3.15%, respectively. These gains were supported by the US Fed's rate cut, RON95 subsidy rationalization, and broadly steady corporate earnings. Overall trading volume fell 3.72% from the previous month. Crude oil prices fell 1.61% to US Dollar (USD) 67.02 per barrel as supply outpaced demand after the summer peak, leading to inventory builds that put downward pressure on prices. In contrast, gold prices climbed by 10.14%, result from heightened safe-haven demand, as persistent geopolitical risks. Crude palm oil (CPO) prices decline by 0.64%, due to higher inventory level and easing demand. The Malaysian ringgit appreciated by 0.42% against the US dollar, closing at RM4.2072 at the end of September.

China's move to curb domestic price wars, while aimed at stabilizing its industries, signals a potential risk for global markets. We believe this policy will likely compel Chinese companies to export their excess capacity, creating significant headwinds for international competitors through a surge in low-cost imports. Concurrently, growing social unrest in Asia, fuelled by concerns over corruption and economic inequality, is pressuring governments towards more populist fiscal policies. Despite these regional risks, our optimistic outlook on Emerging Market (EM) equities is unchanged. We maintain our conviction that a forthcoming reversal of capital flows from US markets will serve as a powerful tailwind for EM assets, ultimately outweighing these localized challenges.
